Mistral

VCR OSD Mono

The typefaces I chose reflect the aesthetic I was trying to achieve. Mistral is reminiscent of the decade, while VCR OSD Mono is an effect from old technology I wanted to use. From there, I needed to round out the layout's readability with a San Serif font.

I wanted to go with colors that would call back to this era in pop culture, I looked through a lot of research and settled on neon colors that pop off of a bluish grey.

The buttons used here are in line with old technology pre-internet. CD and cassette players followed these standard shapes.

I wanted the buttons to resemble something out of what you would see out of an old VCR's UI display.
